WHAT WAS DONE

Under the SAAHAS Fellowship, Hartek Foundation, in collaboration with the Punjab Road Safety and Traffic Research Centre, is conducting an ongoing research study that has surveyed 200 women commuters across Punjab, alongside comprehensive day and night safety audits at key bus stops and shelters. The fellowship aims to generate evidence-based solutions for improving public transport infrastructure and ensuring safer travel for women. These findings will support data-driven improvements to bus stop infrastructure, enhancing commuter safety and creating a more secure, inclusive, and gender-responsive public transport system.

"Under the SAAHAS Fellowship with Hartek Foundation, translating my field research into actionable evidence has been incredibly impactful. Elevating the voices of 200 women commuters and auditing across Punjab bus stops allowed me to bridge the gap between grassroots safety struggles and macro-level policy. It is powerful to know this data will directly shape safer, gender-responsive public transit across Punjab."

LEADERSHIP PERSPECTIVES IN THE MEDIA

In exclusive interactions with Exchange4media and India CSR, Harkirat Kaur, CEO of Hartek Foundation, articulated a definitive shift in corporate social responsibility moving away from brand-centric visibility toward measurable, human-centric transformation.

- Storytelling with Purpose (via Exchange4media): Kaur emphasized that authentic storytelling must prioritize the voices of beneficiaries over corporate logos. By centering narratives around the human experience such as the 4,000+ government school students empowered with digital literacy through Hartek Skill Labs organizations can build deep, structural credibility based on real grassroots change.
- The Smart Village Model (via India CSR): The feature detailed Hartek Foundation's scalable Smart Village Model for building resilient rural communities. Moving past isolated acts of philanthropy, this integrated framework drives systemic change by fostering sustainable, women-led economic livelihoods, bringing vital healthcare to remote areas through mobile medical camps, and utilizing data-driven partnerships with global research bodies like J-PAL South Asia.
